Call for Papers

SYMHEALTH 2017 is envisaged as a platform to create a multi-dimensional pool of knowledge across all disciplines connected with healthcare. The research studies shared through the scientific articles aim for a cross fertilization of ideas across students, academicians, industry professionals and other stakeholders and explore the possibility of opening up new avenues for research. The interdisciplinary flavor of the conference tracks which links health with other disciplines envisions a great impetus on collaborative and interdisciplinary research.

Towards this objective, we therefore extend an invitation through 'Call for papers' to all scientists, industry professionals, academicians and scholars to submit their abstracts for topics related, but not limited, to the conference tracks.

All papers should be submitted within timelines to-
